

Fee Increase Defeated Class Officers Debated Delaney's "A Taste of Honey" Begins Spring Weekend Here

By DAVID WALSH, '66, Thelmo Correspondent

The Thelmo senators Tuesday night defeated a proposal to increase the student fee.

The executive committee initially moved "that the Thelmo senate request the University to increase the General Fee by $10 for the 1966-1967 academic year and that the sum total of this increase be allocated to the senate under the Financial Centralization Plan to supplement and expand present student activities."

Objections raised by student affairs chairman Peter Trumbull, '68, and by senator Philip Henshaw, '68, pointed out that the senate had not sufficiently defined its need for an increased revenue of $17,000. Also, it was felt that programming of cultural events was not in the realm of student government and that existing organizations, namely the concert and lecture committee and the UCA, were better equipped to provide extracurricular cultural development.

Henshaw said that he thought it would be good to have more money but that the senate was attempting to acquire it in an unprecedented and illogical manner.

Trumbull said that the students should seriously question the wisdom of levying a tax upon themselves. He said that the General Fee should be determined by those who set the tuition and room and board because the General Fee is of that order.

Henshaw disagreed with Trumbull. He believed that the senate does have the right to consider, to appropriate and to allocate monies. He still maintained, however, that the proposal being considered was inappropriate.

The senators defeated the proposed increase by a majority.

Committee 'X' introduced a discussion of the merits of class officers. Vice-President Harriette Barber, as chairman of the committee, moderated the discussion. A straw vote of the senators seemed to indicate that the students felt that class officers were necessary for the freshman and senior classes but that they were not as imperative to the sophomore and junior classes. No definite action was taken.

Bruce Kashdan, director of CDC, was given a round of applause by the senators for his contributions to the campus and surrounding communities during the past several years.

Kashdan had come before the senate to give a final report of the progress of CDC and to announce the appointment of Jacqueline Alberga, '67, as his successor and her assistant, William Dennett, '68. Emblidge said that CDC is one of few successful endeavors on the campus which can be attributed directly to the efforts of one man.

Freshman senator Lawrence Cohen suggested that a special committee be established to assess and evaluate student opinion. This brought replies from President David Emblidge and Senator Philip Henshaw, '68, to the effect that this is substantially the purpose of the senate itself, and that if any lack of information regarding student opinion does exist, it is a direct failure of the individual senators. It was suggested to Cohen by Parliamentarian James Garbarino that a student affairs sub-committee to statistically tabulate student opinion might be instituted.

William Fuller, Columbia Bound, Given Fellowship

William J. Fuller, III, a senior English major, has been appointed an International Fellow by the International Fellows Program of Columbia University, where he will pursue a master of science degree at the Pulitzer School of Journalism of Columbia in the fall.

In conjunction with the program, he has been appointed a Noble Leadership Fellow by the Edward John Noble Fellowship Foundation and will receive a Noble Leadership Grant to continue his education.

Fuller, a brother of Phi Sigma Kappa, is a past editor of the Laurentian and served this year as vice president of Pi Delta Epsilon journalism honorary. He chaired a revamped Parent's Weekend this year at its first appearance in the fall and has served as Thelmo cabinet representative and committee head. He is also a Dean's List student.

The International Fellows Program was conceived in the belief that the international problems which face the United States require new approaches in the education of tomorrow's leaders. Through this program each Fellow must combine a graduate professional education at Columbia University with an intensive academic and practical education in international politics.

In addition to his regular studies, an International Fellow must take a one-year lecture-seminar course especially designed for him, the Role of the United States in World Affairs. The program also brings outstanding scholars and government officials to the University and arranges special briefings in the White House, the Congress, the United Nations and various national and international agencies.

"A TASTE OF HONEY" — Leads in the cast of "Honey" Susan Mallen, Katherine Haynie, and Philip Benoit, all seniors rehearse for their opening tonight. This cast will also appear Saturday night. A different cast was on tap for the opening last night and will perform again tomorrow.

Two separate and distinct productions of Shelagh Delaney's celebrated play, A Taste of Honey, will be staged by the Mummies, beginning tonight. Mrs. Marguerite Holmes, of the Dramatic Arts department, will direct the performances on Wednesday, May 4 and Friday, May 6, On Thursday, May 5, and Saturday, May 7, William Jenkins, '66, will direct.

There will be two casts. Appearing under Mrs. Holmes' direction, Karin Volckmann, '66, who played Caitlin in the recent Mummies production of Dylan, will star. Carole Ashkinaze, '66, Jeffrey Pavsek, Charles Kenney, and Michael Sullivan, all '68, fill out the remainder of the cast. The cast on Thursday and Saturday evenings stars Katherine Haynie, '66, and Susan Mallen, '68. Philip Benoit, '66, Addison Adams and Alan Teichman, both '68 play supporting roles.

A Taste of Honey was Miss Delaney's first play and was written when she was nineteen. A sensation in London, it played to enthusiastic crowds in New York and has been translated into several foreign languages. The setting is a tenement in the London slums and the action involves a young girl's introduction to love and life. The decay and disorder of her mother's example is set in contrast to her purity and innocence.

Two Professors to Greener Pastures

Andrews to UConn; Dr. Spandorf to Leave; Heads Dept. There To Be Head at Cazenovia

Dr. Oliver Andrews, Jr., head of the modern language department, is leaving St. Lawrence next year to become head of the romance and classical language department over a staff of 35 at the University of Connecticut at Storrs, Connecticut.

One of the major reasons for Dr. Andrews' acceptance of the position at Connecticut is his position as executive director of the Charles Travelli Scholarship Fund, with its headquarters in Boston, Massachusetts, in his capacity as executive director, Dr. Andrews must make numerous trips to the fifteen schools in the East which participate in the undergraduate program, and the University of Connecticut is more centrally located than St. Lawrence for this purpose.

At Connecticut, Dr. Andrews' teaching will probably be limited to graduate courses.

The new head of the St. Lawrence modern language department will probably come from outside the present teaching staff.

Dr. Andrews said his transferral does not reflect on St. Lawrence. "I love St. Lawrence and I like my work here," he said.

Dr. Adolf A. Spandorf, associate professor of biology at SLU since 1957, is leaving St. Lawrence after this semester to assume the position of chairman of the Department of natural sciences at Cazenovia College, a women's junior college at Cazenovia, New York.

There he will plan and coordinate instruction in biology, chemistry, geology, and physics. Science facilities at Cazenovia are to be expanded soon with the completion of a new science building in September 1967 which Dr. Spandorf will help plan.

This summer Dr. Spandorf is to participate in a program in India sponsored by the Agency for International Development as a consultant to summer science institutes at Indian universities beginning May 24 and ending at the end of July.

While at St. Lawrence, Dr. Spandorf has participated in numerous faculty committees. Recently he has been involved with the planning and operating of CDC and has served as a member of the selection committee for CDC. Prior to coming to St. Lawrence, Dr. Spandorf studied at Syracuse University where he received his doctorate.

We Five Again Scheduled to Perform Here

The curse of Winter Carnival is upon us again. You'd think that after Ray Silverman signed The Beau Brummels and the Byrds and neither of them showed we might have learned our lesson. But, alas, we did not, and we can now add the We Five to the no show list.

The We Five, scheduled to perform here Sunday were suddenly "cancelled." Now, according to Neale Roth, co-ordinator of student activities, they are scheduled again for this coming Sunday at 6 p.m.

Roth made an effort to explain the group's cancellation. Agency A, he said, handles all bookings for the We Five. Agency B purchased the group from agency A for three performances for last Saturday and Sunday in Potsdam and Plattsburg.

Roth contacted agency C and asked that the group be booked here. Agency C promptly bought the We Five from agency B for the scheduled Sunday night performance. Agency B did not inform agency A. Agencies B and C informed the We Five, who confirmed the booking by telegram to Mr. Roth.

The We Five's performance in Plattsburg Sunday was scheduled for 2 p.m. Two days earlier, agency B was informed that that concert was being set ahead to 6 p.m. but neglected to inform agency C.

The singers' performance at 6 did not end until after 8 and they could not have arrived here until 11:30 at the earliest. Unfortunately agencies C and A were informed of the developments far too late to let Roth know before Sunday morning.

Since then Roth has arranged for the We Five to perform here next Sunday. This time, he hopes, the group will show up. He has been assured that they will by agency A, or maybe it was agency C again. Would you believe agency D?
